

Consumer Federation of America * Consumers Union * Kids in Danger
National Consumers League * National Research Center for Women &
Families * Public Citizen * U.S. Public Interest Research Group

January 30, 2009

The President of the United States
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Ave, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear President Obama:

As leaders of organizations dedicated to protecting consumers from the hazards posed by unsafe products, we are writing to urge you to move quickly to put in place new leadership at the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC).

As you know, the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act (CPSIA) was signed into law on August 14, 2008, after many months of discussion, multiple hearings, and input from stakeholders. The law was passed in both chambers by huge bipartisan margins: 89-3 in the Senate and 424-1 in the U.S. House of Representatives.

The bipartisan CPSIA makes consumer products safer by requiring, for the first time, that toys and infant products be tested for safety before they are sold, and by banning lead and phthalates in toys. The law also creates the first comprehensive publicly-accessible consumer complaint database, authorizes for the CPSC the resources it needs to protect the public, increases civil penalties that CPSC can assess against violators of laws, and protects whistleblowers who report product safety defects. This law is a strong, effective and much-needed solution to the persistent problems plaguing our product safety system.

Unfortunately, the current CPSC leadership, which is responsible for implementing this critical new law, has delayed taking the necessary steps to ensure its successful implementation. As a result, the agency has not properly addressed concerns being raised by small businesses, home crafters, thrift stores, book publishers, and libraries among others. These concerns involve, for example, establishing common-sense exclusions from lead testing for textiles and paper-based books that are proven to be lead-free, component part testing where appropriate for lead and phthalates, and clear guidance for thrift stores. This did not have to be the case. The CPSIA already includes mechanisms for solving these legitimate concerns raised by these groups in a manner that protects the public health.

As a result, this has created a climate of confusion and is contributing to broader efforts to undermine consumer safety in this nation. Effective leadership at the CPSC is urgently needed to help implement the law as intended, to provide common sense interpretations of the law, and to clarify pervasive misstatements and confusion about this consumer protective law.

Nominating a new Chairman of the CPSC is critical. The Chairman has direct command and control over all the nonpolitical career staff and all of the scientific, enforcement and communications apparatus of the Agency. The Chairman sets the agenda, directs the policies executed by the Agency, and manages the distribution of the Agency's resources. All of the offices and directorates of the Commission report to the Chair, either directly or through the office of the Executive Director. In addition, quick action is necessary is because the current acting chair remains in that position until a new nominee is confirmed.

As you know, the CPSC has been underfunded and understaffed for too long. We urge you to move expeditiously to nominate a strong chairperson to the CPSC with product safety expertise who can implement the critical new product safety law and begin to tackle the myriad of issues facing this agency.

Sincerely,

Stephen Brobeck
Executive Director
Consumer Federation of America

Jim Guest
President
Consumers Union

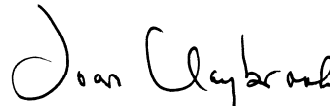

Nancy Cowles
Executive Director
Kids in Danger

Sally Greenberg
Executive Director
National Consumers League

Dr. Diana Zuckerman
President
National Research Center for Women
& Families

Joan Claybrook
President
Public Citizen

Andre DeLattre
Executive Director
U.S. Public Interest Research Group

cc:

Rahm Emanuel

Don Gips

Jim Messina

Phil Schiliro

Staff contacts:

Consumer Federation of America, Rachel Weintraub, Director of Product Safety & Senior Counsel, 202-387-6121

Consumers Union, Ellen Bloom, Director of Federal Policy and the Washington Office, 202-462-6262

Kids in Danger, Nancy Cowles, Executive Director, 312-595-0649

National Consumers League, Sally Greenberg, Executive Director, 202-835-3323

National Research Center for Women & Families, Paul Brown, Government Relations Manager, 202-223-4000

Public Citizen, David Arkush, Director, Public Citizen's Congress Watch, 202-588-1000

U.S. Public Interest Research Group, Ed Mierzwinski, Consumer Program Director, 202-546-9707x314

Consumer and Science Groups Set the Record Straight: Landmark Product Safety Law Makes the Marketplace Safer (press release)