Doctors are increasingly worried. Antibiotics are losing their ability to fight lethal infections in human beings. A tremendous part of this problem is that most antibiotics sold in the U.S. are fed to healthy livestock. Why put animals that aren’t sick on meds? So that they can grow unnaturally fast and tolerate unsanitary living conditions. A recent Consumer Reports poll of doctors found that 93% are concerned about this reckless practice. We’re urging you to join the over 2,000 medical professionals — and hundreds of thousands of other consumers — by asking Trader Joe’s to stop selling meats raised on antibiotics. Call them now and say, “No more meat on drugs!” at 800 221 2063.

Call Trader Joe’s And Say, “NO MORE MEAT ON DRUGS!” AT 800 221 2063